The British National Party leadership election of 2011 was triggered on 28 June 2011 when the party adopted a new constitution that required a leadership election to take place every four years. Two candidates stood in the leadership election: Nick Griffin and Andrew Brons. On 25 July 2011, the results of the leadership election were announced, with Griffin being named the winner by just 9 votes. Griffin had secured 1,157 votes compared to the 1,148 votes for Brons.

UK NEA

A number of data and methodological issues have been identified since publication of the UK 2011 Area Classification for Local Authorities in July 2015. We have now withdrawn the previously published classification, and all supporting documentation, and reworked the classification to produce a corrected version of the classification.
