"The history of psychology, like the histories of nations, is made up of countless discrete events, each occurring at some fixed time in the past. Although it is unlikely that any of these events will ever be the occasion for a national holiday, a chronological record of important events presents an interesting perspective on the story of the development of contemporary psychology. This volume contains brief descriptions and exact dates of 2,827 noteworthy events in the history of psychology, with particular attention given to American psychology and the American Psychological Association (APA). The collection includes dates of birth; publication of important books, articles, and mental tests; passage of influential legislation; events in the histories of psychological associations and institutions; court decisions, research announcements, and awards; and scores of other events not easily categorized. Each event has been numbered in chronological order, beginning with Entry 1, the reported date of the birth of Plato, and ending with Entry 2827, the appearance of Sigmund Freud on the cover of Time magazine for the fourth time. The collection has been compiled from biographies and autobiographies, public archives, history texts, journal articles, biographical dictionaries, association archives, contemporary newspaper reports, and correspondence with psychologists who were present when the events took place. A complete source citation for each event exceeds the scope of this volume, but a description of frequently used sources is appropriate"--Introduction. (PsycINFO

Excerpt from Tabular Views of Universal History: A Series of Chronological Tables Presenting, in Parallel Columns, a Record of the More Noteworthy Events in the History of the World From the Earliest Times Down to 1890 This chronology of historical events, originally compiled by the late George P. Putnam and forming a part of his comprehensive cyclopedia on The World's Progress, has been carefully revised and brought down to the present time, and it is now issued in a separate form in the trust that every one who needs at his elbow a convenient manual of dates may find his requirements satisfied in this volume. To teachers especially it is hoped that it may prove an important aid in imparting instruction. They more than all others appreciate the difficulty of permanently fixing in the mind the exact time of great occurrences, and they should accordingly value any means of lessening that difficulty. Such a means, it is thought, is found in the arrangement here adopted of placing in parallel columns on facing pages the events occurring throughout the world at about the same period of time. This calls in the powerful assistance of association in enabling the memory to grasp and retain a hold of important dates by showing at a glance simultaneous occurrences in other countries. It also helps in teaching the lesson that the history of any one nation is only a part of the history of the world and that the proper way to study true history is to follow the progress of the people scattered over the face of the globe, and not of a fragmentary few gathered into one corner of it. Excerpt from Tabular Views of Universal History: A Series of Chronological Tables, Presenting, in Parallel Columns, a Record of the More Noteworthy Events in the History of the World From the Earliest Times Down to the Present Day It has been the intention of the editor in the several instances in which events and dates have become a matter of controversy, to follow the authorities most generally accepted. It may easily, however, be the case that an occasional date/or statement has been retained which some scholarly reader may find ground to question; such a critic can only be referred back to the latest investigators for the authoritative decision that seems to him to be important and that it is not practicable to attempt in a condensed summary of the world's history such as is presented in the present volume. The study of history and the intelligent reading of history should be, as stated, a study of the relations of events to each other made with the view of securing as far as practicable an understanding of the causation of these events and of the influence exercised upon them by historic characters, by the leaders of men. This is the information which the publishers are undertaking to present to the
